1. The outstanding manner in which you performed your duties during the period 21 January 1971 to 15 April 1971 is appreciated. As Staff Researcher and Allegations Analyst, Allegations Branch, Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence and Department of the Army Special Task Force, you assisted in providing rapid responses to requests for information from military and civilian leaders at the highest levels of the Departments of Army and Defense. These officials were preparing for Hearings before Committees of the Congress and investigating allegations of improper activities on the part of Army intelligence. The sensitivity of these matters which had arisen from considerable public controversy demanded that the responses be factual in order to withstand the closest public and Congressional scrutiny. Your professional competence, personal initiative, and prudent attention to detail made you an invaluable asset to the Task Force.

2. Your exemplary performance of duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon you, the United States Army Intelligence Control Group, and the United States Army.

MEMORANDUM FOR General W. C. Westmoreland
Chief of Staff, United States Army

I wish to commend Major General Joseph A. McChristian and his staff for their contributions in developing testimony for the hearing held yesterday by the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. In particular, the task force headed by Colonel John Downie deserves special credit for their untiring efforts and their ability to document our record. Strong staff support, such as exemplified by Colonel Downie and his task force, measurably contributed to the Department's presentation.

1. Preceding correspondence indicates the outstanding devotion to duty and professional competence displayed during your assignment with the Special Task Force, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence. I am fully aware of the pressures of the detailed tasking, the short suspense dates, and the long and irregular working hours imposed during this assignment. You are fully deserving of the commendations extended for your performance.
